THE QUARTERDECK

CONUS BASES CHECKED CLOSURES & REALIGNMENTS

There is only one Naval Postgraduate School. That in itself could lower the probability of the school landing on the recommended closure list compiled by the DBCRC (Defense Base Closure Realignment Commission).

However, just as every base inside the U.S. is being looked at, so too is NPS.

The commission, derived from the DBCR Act of 1990, is to provide a fair process that will result in the timely closure and realignment of military installations inside the United States.

This statutory process is designed to ensure that recommendations are based on selection criteria and a 6-year force structure developed by DoD and are subject to review by an independent commission, the president and the Congress.

Each service submits its recommendations for base closures to the Secretary of Defense, who submits recommendations to the DBCRC. This process took place in 1991 and will be repeated this year and in 1995.

The commission completes its review and submits its recommendations to the president and Congress.

The president can either approve or disapprove the recommendations in whole or in part. If he approves, he forwards his approval to the Congress. If the president disapproves the report in whole or in part, the commission must submit a new report.

If the president disapproves the revised commission report, there will be no base closure and realignment list submitted for 1993.

ITINERARY BASE CLOSURE PROCESS

The itinerary for Base Closure Realignment is as follows:

Jan. 25 - - Bipartisan commission (Defense Base Closure and Realignment), consisting of eight members, is selected by the president and confirmed by the Senate.

Feb. 22 - - Navy's Base Structure Evaluation Committee submits a base closure and realignment list to Secretary of the Navy.

Mar. 1 - - Secretary of the Navy will submit a base closure and realignment list to the Secretary of Defense

Mar. 15 - - Secretary of Defense submits a recommended list of base closures and realignments to the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission.

Jul. 1 - - Defense Closure and Realignment Commission completes its review and submits its recommendations to the president and Congress.

Jul. 15 - - If approved by the president, he forwards his approval to the Congress.

Aug. 15 - - Deadline for the commission to resubmit list of recommendations of base closures and realignments if the original is disapproved by the president.

Sep. 1 - - Deadline for the president to approve or disapprove the revised commission's report and transmit it to Congress. If, on this date, the president disapproves the revised commission's report, there will be no base closure and realignment list submitted in 1993.

SUPERINTENDENT INTERVIEWED

The following are excerpts from an interview with NPS Superintendent Rear Adm. Thomas A. Mercer and The Herald Editorial Staff last week.

Future NPS population: "I think we're very well postured to continue the student load we have now, about 1,800 students. Certainly there may be some minor downsizing due to the overall downsizing of the U.S. military."

Possible greater utilization of NPS by other services: "I believe there's a good appreciation of the uniqueness of the school. The Army is committed to this institution for technical subjects plus command and control. As we consolidate the armed forces and look more to jointness, a decision will have to be made on where we're going to do graduate education, particularly on military-related subjects."

On recent NPS construction: "This is really the first new construction in about 18 years and puts us in very good stead as we proceed into a few more lean years."

Possible NPS tie-in to oceanic, biological research plans at Fort Ord: "I think you'd certainly have to say that if NPS and FNOC weren't here it would decrease the synergistic effect that might occur from cooperative efforts between NOAA, a state university, and the sanctuary. This area has the potential to continue to attract some of the the best in the field."

What will be the effect on the Navy if NPS closes: "Then it's a question of what level are you going to continue to

50th ANNIVERSARY OF DEL MONTE FLIGHT SCHOOL

Commissioning ceremony Feb. 13, 1943.

Saturday marked the 50th anniversary of the Navy's arrival at the old Del Monte Hotel when the Navy formally commissioned the Del Monte Pre-Flight School.

The Del Monte Pre-Flight School was one of five commissioned to accelerate pilot training. Other schools were established at Athens, Ga., Chapel Hill, N. C., Iowa City, Iowa, and Moraga, Calif.

In operation for only 11 months, the Del Monte Pre-Flight School became the temporary home for nearly 5,000 aviation cadets between February 1943 and January 1944.

Even though the Navy phased out the pre-flight school, it maintained its lease agreement with the hotel to run the Naval Technical School for electronics technicians and radiomen. NTS was followed by the General Line School and, in December 1951, the Naval Postgraduate School began the cross country move from Annapolis to its new campus in Monterey.

comers' Evening on Thursday, Feb. 18 in the Barbara McNitt Ballroom at 7 p.m.

The feature presentation will be "Cramalot," a musical comedy performed by fellow students and spouses, giving a humorous and entertaining look at family and student life at NPS.

For more information concerning OSSC or "Cramalot" contact Angela Ellis at 372-4425 or Lisa Brown at 647-8516.

develop the subspecialists who are going to perform the political-military work that our graduates out of national security affairs do? Who are going to be the experts who do the acquisition and contracting and financial management? Who are going to be the manpower personnel experts that we train in our courses? Over time, maybe civilian institutions will be able to pick up that load. But I think it would leave a generation of officers — four, five or six years of officers — that would not have those particular skills."
